

Sudanese will draw on tunisian experience in technical education

Sudanese Secretary General at the National Technical Education Council Abdelmahmoud Othman Mansour, expressed his country's will to draw on the Tunisian experience in technical education.

During his meeting, on Friday, Nov. 12, 2010, in Tunis, with Education Minister Hatem Ben Salem, the Sudanese guest lauded the high level of Tunisian skills, expressing appreciation for the high quality and international-standard equipment of the vocational training centers.

He said Tunisia has taken significant steps to strengthen the technical branch, allowing it to keep pace with the development of the job market nationally and internationally and meet the requirements of the globalised economy.

The Sudanese official expressed hope that talks within the Tunisian-Sudanese Joint Committee would culminate in a memorandum of understanding providing for the exchange of visits and experiences in this promising field.

For his part, Mr. Ben Salem highlighted the depth of relations between the two sisterly countries and the fruitful bilateral co-operation, emphasizing Tunisia's will to contribute to the development of the technical education sector in Sudan.
